Basel, Switzerland, 14 April 2021 – HEMEX strongly believes in the power of extensive partnerships, collaboration, and teamwork among interprofessional fields. Therefore, we're delighted to present new services which complement our offering. Our collaboration with youEngineering adds expert knowledge in the field of software development with flexible and tailor-made solutions.

The range of packages now on offer will allow start-ups to find optimal combinations for mobile app development, software and web design. Among the new offerings, youEngineering will provide customised software development solutions built on many years of experience within the IT industry. HEMEX currently offers a variety of digital services as website design, electronic data capture, or cloud-based eQMS platform. They will now be diversified with youEngineering's expertise on responsive websites to cross- platform compatible solutions for both iOS and Android. We will offer a free of charge initial consultation to identify the best tailored solution to ensure each and every customer can benefit in the best possible way.

«Through the youEngineering collaboration, HEMEX will now be able to add software development services to the extensive portfolio of services we deliver to life-science start-ups. We will combine our healthcare expertise with youEngineering's digital skills to give digital health start-ups the specialized support they need to succeed», said Pascal Winnen, CEO of HEMEX.

« Hemex provides invaluable expertise that enables us to develop compliant software for the medical and pharmaceutical fields. Together with the great team at Hemex, we can deliver state of the art digital solutions that exceed customer demands», said Marc Baur, CEO of youEngineering.

We're proud to welcome youEngineering as our latest partner. Contact us today to learn more about our range of exciting new packages!
